

The Characteristics of Ethnic Culture of the Korean-Chinese Christian Churches in Yanbian City

(An abstract)

Gong Yukuan

Director

Department of Philosophy and Religion

The Central University for Nationalities

China

Christianity as a religious culture in the world surpasses the limits of regions and races. The Korean-Chinese people in Yanbian is one of the ethnic groups who have been able to preserve their traditional culture to a large extent. By looking at the version of the Bible they use, their religious way of life, and their social and family ethics, festivals, customs and habits, as well as their approbation of the religion and their ethnicity, we can see that this Korean-Chinese group accept Christianity in their own ethnic ways, and that they have combined their faith with their culture very well. Not only do they believe in Christianity, but they also preserve their own traditional culture as much as possible.